DEPARTMENT OF LABOR AND INDUSTRIES

FORTY-FOURTH ANNUAL

Directory of Labor Organizations in Massachusetts, 1946

With Statistics of Membership, 1941-1945

INTRODUCTION

The material here presented constitutes the Forty-Fourth Annual Directory of Labor Organizations in Massachusetts, the first directory of this character having been published in August, 1902.¹ The term "Labor Organization", as used in this directory, is a group of employees or wage-earners organized for the purpose of improving their status through negotiations with employers and, to this end, is usually a party to either a written or verbal agreement concerning wages and conditions of employment.

Since the 1944 Directory was issued, many new unions have been organized, some have changed their affiliations, and others have become inactive or disbanded.² The net result, with respect to local labor unions, was a gain of 30 since 1944 due largely to post-war organization activities.

This edition consists of four divisions, as follows:

I. "National and International Organizations" having one or more affiliated local unions in the United States (pages 3-13).

II. "Delegates Organizations" consisting of organizations composed of delegates from local unions whose members are in trades or industries of a like character within a definite district, or of delegates from local unions in the same locality, not necessarily in similar trades (pages 14-23).

III. "Local Labor Unions" composed of wage-earners in a single locality, directly associated in what may be termed the "unit body" of organization (pages 24-111).

IV. "Statistics of Labor Organizations" showing number and membership of local unions as of January 15, 1945, with data for four prior years (pages 112-116).

At the beginning of each year a general canvass is made for the data which appear in this directory. Each national and international labor organization known to be in existence in the United States (See Section I) is requested to furnish the Department with the name and address of its corresponding official and a list of any Massachusetts locals affiliated, together with the names and addresses of certain officials of such unions. From the delegate organizations in Massachusetts (See Section II) somewhat similar data are secured. Each local unit known to be in existence, whether or not chartered by a parent body, is canvassed and detailed information is secured as to the time and place of meeting, the names and addresses of corresponding and other officials, and other relevant data (See Section III). These same unions also report the membership of their organizations (See Section IV). So-called "plant unions" functioning independently, and not chartered by any labor organization, are not required to report their existence to any agency, and there may be some of these concerning which this Department has no record.

¹ An edition of this directory has been published each year since 1902, except in 1903, in which year the directory for 1902 was reprinted, and the 1945 edition was omitted because of the extensive changes which occurred since the report was compiled.

² Total number of organizations listed in this issue is 2,432, of which number 213 are national and international organizations, 195 are delegate organizations, and 2,024 are local labor unions.

Officials of those organizations from whom no report was received in response to the original request were visited by the statistical investigators of the Division, and the necessary data were secured. There were also ascertained, from various sources, facts with reference to the forming of new unions and the disbanding of those formerly active. At the time of going to press, there were incorporated in this issue such changes as had come to the attention of the Department since the original canvass was made. Subsequent changes cannot, of course, be made in this report but are on record where known. Officials of organizations listed herein are urged to advise the Department of any such changes as they occur. The Department makes every effort to issue the directory as early in the year as possible, as much of its usefulness depends upon the promptness of its issue. In this endeavor we have had the cordial co-operation of labor officials throughout the State.

III. LOCAL LABOR UNIONS

The names of the local unions appear in this section, grouped for ready reference alphabetically by trade and occupational headings, under the respective municipalities in which their headquarters are located. Nearly all of the local unions are affiliated with national or international bodies. Designations of local unions follow closely the names of parent bodies as given in Section I. "Federal Labor Unions" are those chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor, and should not be confused with unions of federal or government employees.

The following facts are given for each union; name and charter number (and brief identifying description where advisable); time and place of meeting, if held regularly each week or month at a given place; and name and address of secretary, business agent, or other authorized representative. Union meetings are usually held, on week days, about 7.30 or 8.00 P. M., and on Sunday, about 2.00 P. M. In those instances where meetings are scheduled at other times, the hours are specified.

IV. STATISTICS OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS, 1941-1945

Introductory

Statistical data are here presented having reference to the number and membership of labor organizations which were in existence in Massachusetts as of January 15, 1945, with comparable data for each of four prior years. The questionnaire sent each January for "Directory" purposes includes an inquiry calling for the number of members of each local organization, by sex. For the most part, the information requested was secured by mail, but where the questionnaires were not returned, statistical investigators of the Department obtained the necessary facts from some official source.

Details with respect to individual unions are held strictly confidential and are used only in the compilation of totals. Accordingly, in order not to disclose the membership of any local union reporting, the data presented do not relate in any case to less than five organizations in any group.

Statistics of labor organizations in Massachusetts were collected annually, beginning with the year 1908, by the former Bureau of Labor Statistics, and since 1919 by the Division of Statistics of the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries. Summaries of returns have been preserved in the files of the Division. The tabulations have not included unions of letter carriers, post office clerks, railway mail clerks, or others in the postal service.

1. Comparison by Industries and Trades.

It is now the general policy of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, to admit all workers in a plant to a single organization, commonly known as a "plant" or "shop" type of union, without regard to the class of work performed by them but in which different crafts are represented in the governing body. The War Labor Board, in those cases presented for its consideration, requires that one union and one only, shall constitute the employees' "bargaining agency" for a plant, or for all plants of a single company. The American Federation of Labor, however, continues to organize members of a single craft or trade, or employees in closely related occupations, in conformity with its earlier policies, through its affiliated national bodies organized on this basis.

The number of local unions in Massachusetts in January, 1945 (excluding the unions of letter carriers, etc., previously mentioned) was 1,799 which was a net gain of seventeen, as compared with the number in existence in January, 1944. During the course of the year many unions became inactive or dissolved, but others were formed, so that there is a net gain for all unions combined. In the tabulation of membership, only those unions were considered which were fully organized. Organizations chartered by national bodies, and those operating independently, were both included.

The membership of local unions varied greatly during the five-year period under discussion in this issue. The least number of members during this period was 358,674 in 1941. There was an outstanding increase of 104,341 members in 1942 over 1941, a still further increase of 62,089 in 1943 over 1942, a decrease of 20,643 in 1944 as compared with 1943, and an increase of 10,909 in 1945 over 1944. The 1945 total membership of 515,370 comprised 374,498 males and 140,872 females. The 1945 male membership showed a decrease of 2,373 when compared with the 1944 male membership, but the female membership in 1945 was 140,872, an all-time high, and an increase of 13,282 over 1944. These varying changes were due, in the case of the male membership, to marked decreases principally in the unions in the metal and machinery trades and, in the case of the female membership, to marked increases in the boot and shoe, and the textile industries, in clothing and garment trades, and in telephone service, each of which has a large proportion of female members.

An endeavor has been made to classify each local organization with that industry or group of trades with which its members are most closely allied or identified (See Table 1). Based on the number of local unions, the leading organized groups in 1945 were as follows: building trades, 293; transportation, 232; metal and machinery trades, 180; textile industry, 136; printing and allied trades, 70; and boot and shoe industry, 51. There were 837 unions in various other industrial and trade groups in 1945, indicating widespread organization activities not confined to the major industries.

Based on membership of local unions therein, the leading groups in 1945 were as follows: metal and machinery trades, 135,056; textile industry, 65,578; transportation, 37,216; building trades, 33,726; boot and shoe industry, 21,161; and printing and allied trades, 10,287. The miscellaneous unions had a total membership of 212,346.

Upon reference to the tabulations, it will be observed that the metal and machinery trades showed the greatest loss (18,943) in 1945 as compared with the 1944 membership, due largely to decreased employment in shipbuilding. The most important gain in membership (19,026) was in the "All Other Industries and Trades" group. The next greatest increase was 9,816 in the membership of the unions in the textile industry, of whom 3,864 were males and 5,952 were females.

2. Distribution by Occupational Groups.

Data are presented in Table 2 for each of the five years 1941-1945, inclusive, and for each occupational group comprising at least 1,000 members in January, 1945. The prevalence of "mixed" unions in the boot and shoe industry and in the textile industry renders it impossible to present any data on an occupational basis for these two important groups.

There were 20 occupational groups comprising at least 5,000 members in 1945, and ten other groups with a membership of between 2,500 and 5,000. The following thirteen groups each had a membership of 10,000 or over: electrical and radio manufacturing employees, 67,808; marine and shipbuilding workers, 30,342; garment workers, 29,347; teamsters, chauffeurs, etc., 20,784; rubber workers, 16,020; municipal and state employees, 13,908; steel workers, 13,540; telephone operators and workers, 12,773; clerks, wholesale and retail, and meat cutters, 12,350; government employees, 12,129; carpenters, 11,810; paper and pulp workers, 11,111; and street and electric railway employees, 10,746.

The marine and shipbuilding workers showed the greatest decreases in 1945 as compared with 1944 (15,323), which decrease corresponded closely with the decrease in 1945 in the number employed in shipbuilding in this State. There was also a decrease of 1,566 in the membership of machinists unions. The membership of unions in "Other Metal Trades" decreased 3,951.

Increases of over 1,000 in membership in January, 1945, over January, 1944, occurred in the following occupations: garment workers, 2,985; government employees, 2,878; telephone operators and workers, 2,365; fishermen and fish workers, 2,005; marine workers, 1,991; steelworkers, 1,321; longshoremen, 1,241; leather workers, tannery, 1,124; paper and pulp workers, 1,050; and gas and electric workers, 1,014.

3. Distribution of Local Unions by Municipalities.

The principal field of activity of that type of labor organization known as a "local" or "labor union" is the city or town in which a large majority of its members find employment, and in which the headquarters or meeting place of the union is located. A union not of the "plant" type is frequently granted jurisdiction over one or more adjacent cities and towns. This is especially true of building trades unions. The jurisdiction of certain types of railroad unions oftentimes extends over an entire system, and their membership thus includes some from distant points on the system represented. In the city of Boston, the total membership of any organization classified thereunder usually is much greater than the number of organized wage-earners who reside there but a majority of whom are employed in Boston or near by. The availability of halls and meeting places is also a factor.

Data are presented in Table 3 showing the number and membership of local unions in Massachusetts in each of the years 1941-1945, inclusive, classified by municipalities in which there were five or more unions with a combined membership of 500 or more in any year.

Boston far outranked the other 44 municipalities listed, with respect to number and membership of local unions in 1945, principally for the reasons given above. Of the 1,799 unions in Massachusetts in 1945, 432, or 24.0 per cent, had their headquarters in Boston. Their aggregate membership was 157,186, or 30.5 per cent, of the total membership (515,370). Of the total membership of the Boston unions, 126,606 were males and 30,580 were females. In 17 municipalities (including Boston) the number of organized wage earners exceeded 5,000, and the combined membership in these 17 municipalities was 408,239, or 79.2 per cent of the aggregate membership (515,370) in the entire state. There were eleven municipalities in which the unions had a membership of more than 10,000, as follows: Boston, 157,186; Lynn, 34,281; Springfield, 33,605; New Bedford, 27,576; Fall River, 22,417; Lawrence, 19,738; Quincy, 18,248; Worcester, 17,607; Brockton, 14,956; Cambridge, 10,742; and Lowell, 10,592. In each of these cities there are certain industries or individual plants which predominate, and which are well organized.

Increases of over 1,000 in membership in January, 1945, over January, 1944, occurred in the following municipalities: Fall River, 8,308; Boston, 5,001; Brockton, 3,009; Lynn, 2,920; New Bedford, 2,530; Gloucester, 1,934; Lowell, 1,471; Worcester, 1,230; and Springfield, 1,179; The only decrease of more than 1,000 was in Quincy, 9,758, most of whom were employed in the ship yards.

The number of female members of local unions was large in each of the following cities: Boston, 30,580; New Bedford, 13,018; Fall River, 9,735; Lynn, 9,280; Springfield, 8,058; Lawrence, 6,765; Brockton, 3,465; Haverhill, 3,204; Lowell, 3,188; Worcester, 2,880; and Cambridge and Watertown, 2,752 each.

¹ The number and membership of the local unions are tabulated under the respective municipalities in which the headquarters of the unions are located. Data are not shown if the number of unions is less than 5 or the membership under 500, or if the totals would disclose the membership of individual organizations. Data, where not shown, are included in the "All Other" group.
